

Govt. Degree College(Men), Srikakulam
Department of Commerce & Management Studies
Skills for Learning presentations and Group Work

Presentations:

The student can watch other people presenting and make a note of what they do well . think about how they could improve and learn from their experience. When you plan your own presentation focus on how to make it excellence. Think about what your participants needs to know as well as considering your delivery style.

Group work:

Develop the group working skills through this activity. Perform better at group assignments and make your self more employable most of the students are nervous about group assignments. They get ready with some plans, ideas and strategies before they start.

Most of the presenters choose a simple structure

1. Beginning
2. Middle
3. End

One of the most Obvious benefits of group presentations is that they improve their communication skills.

Whether they are speaking in front of participants, listening to feedback with their team-mates, they are participating how to convey their ideas clearly and persuasively.
