Health and Hygiene

The study was trying to investigate the health and hygienic conditions of a specific location named Narasjngapalli Srikakulam district. A systematic study was done with specific samples. The survey was conducted in two rounds on the habits of personal hygiene and common diseases spread in that particular region. The survey is aimed to target around 20-25 families in the habitat. Participants were selected using systematic random sampling. The survey included questions related to habits of hygiene and common health problems in the community.

The aim of the survey is to study

- The Diseases commonly affected by the community people.
- Reasons for being infected by the diseases frequently.
- To create awareness on Health and Hygiene
- To create awareness on Personal and Community Health Habits.

What is Health and Hygiene?

According to the World Health Organisation, health is defined as "a state of complete physical, social and mental well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity".

Good health is more important than being free from disease. Healthy people are more efficient, productive and live longer than unfit people. Important factors that contribute to good health are:

1. Balanced Diet
2. Personal Hygiene
3. Regular Exercise

Balanced Diet- To maintain a healthy life, one should take a proper well- balanced diet with plenty of water.

Personal Hygiene- A person should live in a clean environment and must follow good personal hygiene. There should be proper disposal of wastes. Clean surroundings prevent the spread of diseases.

Regular Exercise- Along with good food and hygiene exercise is also very important in maintaining good health. Regular exercise and good sleep help a person to remain fit, stress-free, and active.

Health

What Exactly is Health?

According to scientists, health is a condition of total bodily and mental well-being. A healthy person is one who is mentally and physically fit. Hygiene refers to behaviors or habits that promote excellent health and a clean environment.

Every day, we eat a variety of meals. Food is required by all living creatures. Plants and animals both require nourishment in order to flourish. Plants produce their own food, whereas animals rely on the sustenance of others. We all start the day with a healthy breakfast and then eat at least two additional large meals - lunch and dinner.

Hygiene

The practices that we follow in our day-to-day lives to maintain good health are known as hygiene. This includes:

Personal hygiene

Community hygiene

Personal Hygiene- The following practices should be followed every day to remain Healthy:

- Washing hands before and after eating
- Regular toilet habits
- Cleaning teeth
- Bathing on a regular basis
- Wearing clean and comfortable clothes

- Drinking clean water
- Keeping house clean and insect free
- Cooking in clean utensils

Community Hygiene- The environment in which we live plays a very important role in keeping us healthy. The practices to keep our surroundings clean should include:

- Proper disposal of household wastes
- Cleaning of roads and streets
- Keeping house clean
- Covering dustbins
- Spraying insecticides at regular intervals to ward off insects
- Disease

Sometimes the human body gets affected due to some environmental, physiological or psychological factors which disturb the normal functioning of the body organs. This malfunctioning of the human body is called disease. A disease may affect a person not only physically but also emotionally and mentally.

Diseases and Causes

There are Mainly Two Types of Diseases:

1. Infectious diseases

2. Non-Infectious diseases

Common Infectious Diseases

Infectious diseases are caused by pathogens such as bacteria, fungi, viruses, protozoa, worms, etc. Based on the causative organisms, these can be classified as under:

The pathogens enter the human body through direct contact, contaminated food and water, and through infectious droplets. They multiply in the body and affect the normal functioning of the body.

1. Viral Diseases

a. Common cold

Caused by rhinovirus

Affects nose, bronchioles and respiratory tract

Mainly lasts for 4-5 days

Common symptoms include sore throat, nasal congestion, headache and cough

Spreads by touching infected objects and through droplets during sneezing and coughing.

Hepatitis (Jaundice)

Caused by virus HAV (Hepatitis A Virus)

Affects liver

Common symptoms are high fever, dark yellow urine, loss of appetite, headache, light coloured stool

Spreads through contaminated water

It can be prevented by taking vaccines, drinking boiled and chlorinated water and maintaining proper hygiene.

J. AIDS (Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome) switch services

Caused by HIV (Human Immunodeficiency virus)

Affects the immune system

Common symptoms are swollen lymph nodes, weight loss, fever, loss of memory, night sweating etc

Methods of transmission include:

- a. Using infected needles
- b. Unprotected sexual contact
- c. Transfusion of contaminated blood
- d. From infected mother to unborn child

It can be prevented by avoiding drug abuse, using safe disposable needles, avoiding multiple sex partners, regular medical checkups etc.

2. Bacterial Diseases

a. Typhoid

Caused by bacterium Salmonella typhi

Affects the intestines

Common symptoms are high fever, stomach pain, loss of appetite, headache

Spreads through contaminated food and water

*It can be prevented by taking a vaccine.

3. Fungal Diseases

a. Ringworm

Caused by fungi Microsporum and Trichophyton

Affects skin, nails and scalp

Common symptoms are itching on skin and scalp, dry scaly lesions on skin, nails and scalp

Spreads by direct contact with infected objects

It can be prevented by keeping good personal hygiene.

4. Protozoan Diseases

a. Malaria

Caused by many species of Plasmodium.

Affects the liver and spleen

Common symptoms are high fever accompanied with chills, enlargement of liver and spleen, loss of appetite, headache

Spreads through the bite of female Anopheles mosquito that transfers the sporozoites of Plasmodium from infected person to a normal person.

It can be controlled by eradicating mosquitoes, using mosquito nets and repellents.

Treated by using chloroquine.

Amoebiasis (Amoebic Dysentery)

Caused by Entamoeba histolytica

Affects the large intestine

Common symptoms are stomach pain and cramps, stool with mucus and blood clots, constipation, diarrhoea

Spreads through contaminated food and water when house flies transmit the parasites from faecal matter of infected people to food.

*It can be prevented by drinking clean water, proper disposal of human excreta and covering of cooked food.

5. Helminthic Diseases

a. Filariasis/ Elephantiasis

Caused by Wuchereria bancrofti

*Affects the lymph vessels of legs.

Common symptoms are inflammation of organs, swollen lower legs, thighs and feet resembling elephant's legs.

Spread through bite of female Culex mosquitoes.

It can be prevented by avoiding mosquito bites.

Measures to Prevent Infectious Diseases Include:

Maintaining personal hygiene

Maintaining public hygiene

*Taking well balanced diet

Spreading awareness about diseases and drug abuse

Eradication of disease-causing germs

Vaccination and immunization programmes

Immunity

Immunity is a person's ability to fight against diseases. There are two types of immunity:

1. Innate Immunity- This is present right from birth. It is non-specific. It consists of many barriers:

Physical Barriers- This includes skin, lining of respiratory tract, gastro- intestinal lining and lining of urino- genital tracts where the germs are trapped in mucus.

Physiological Barriers- This includes acid in the stomach and lysozymes in saliva.

Cellular Barriers- This includes special cells like lymphocytes, monocytes, macrophages and neutrophils.

Cytokine Barriers- This includes interferons (a group of proteins produced by viral infected cells) which protect the non-infected cells.

2. Acquired Immunity- This is acquired after birth either by contracting the disease or by vaccination. It is pathogen specific and can be classified into two types:

Active Immunity occurs when antibodies develop in response to antigens developed during natural infection or by vaccination. It stays for a longer period and is time taking.

Passive Immunity occurs when antibodies develop in response to antigens forcibly injected into our bodies. It stays for a short period and is fast in response.

Vaccines- A vaccine is an antigen (weakened form of germ) which when injected/ swallowed causes the body to resist the disease. It does not cause the disease but helps the body to fight the disease when it is actually attacked by the germs. There are vaccines available against diseases such as polio, diphtheria, tuberculosis, measles, hepatitis, small-pox, tetanus etc.

Allergy- Some antigens present in the environment can cause hypersensitive reactions in the immune system.

Such substances are called allergens. Examples include dust mites, pollen grains.

animal fur etc.

Common symptoms are rashes, sneezing, runny nose, difficulty in breathing etc.

Antihistamines are used generally to relieve symptoms of allergy.

Health and Food habits

What is the Source of Food?

Plants and animals provide the majority of the food we consume. We consume several portions of the plant as food. We consume the leaves of certain plants, such as spinach, the seeds of some plants, such as corn, the blooms of other plants, such as broccoli, the stems of some plants, such as potatoes, and the roots of some plants, such as carrots. Animal goods include eggs, milk, and milk products such as butter, ghee, and so on. We also consume the meat of animals such as chicken, fish, and goats. Thus, food may be classified into five categories depending on its utility to our bodies. These foods offer energy, help to grow our bodies, protect them from sickness, and keep us healthy and strong.

Food Components: The five categories or components of food are as follows:

Carbohydrates

Fats

Proteins

Vitamins

Minerals

What are Carbohydrates?

Carbohydrates are sometimes referred to as energy-producing foods.

We require energy to do daily activities such as jogging, walking, cycling, and so on. Carbohydrate-rich foods include potatoes, bananas, corn, sugar, cereals, and so forth.

What are Fats?

Fats, like carbs, are considered energy-giving foods. Excess carbs are converted and stored as fat in our bodies.

Meat, ghee, vegetable oil, milk, butter, cheese, and dried fruits are high in fat.

Although fatty meals are required for the body, an excess of these foods leads to weight problems such as obesity, which leads to cardiac difficulties.

What Exactly are Proteins?

Protein-rich diets are those that aid in the growth and repair of our bodies' muscles and tissues. This is one of the most vital dietary categories. It helps to strengthen muscles and heal damaged tissues in our bodies. Protein-rich foods include milk, poultry, eggs, fish, soya beans, and so on.
